RESEARCH INTERESTS

My research line is grounded in my expertise in leadership and organizational behavior in sport. I focus my research on servant leadership and positive organizational behavior among sport employees and/or coaches and their effectiveness in providing the best experiences for followers. My research is based on qualitative methodology and the interpretivist paradigm. Uniquely, my research agenda is interdisciplinary (i.e., sport management and sport coaching) transversing the experiences and perceptions of sport employees and sport coaches largely within the intercollegiate athletics context. The topics of my research consist of servant leadership, inclusive leadership, positive organizational behavior, organizational culture, organizational performance, coaching effectiveness/expertise, coach education and coach development.
